English Theatre Berlin | International Performing Arts Center will once again open up its entire campus to the English-speaking international community of artists for the 2014 edition of the EXPAT EXPO. Performers, musicians, theater makers, writers, comedians and performing artists in every genre imaginable have been invited to present their art and creativity to Berlin for one Anglomanic week.

Berliner Melange Deluxe: the EXPAT EXPO is a one-of-a-kind opportunity to get a glimpse into Berlin's dizzying artistic diversity and maybe discover one or another newcomer.

The EXPAT EXPO has three components: evening performances, daytime workshops & family shows and the Expat Markt.

PEARLS FROM OVER 70 APPLICATIONS

With more than 70 excellent applications, over 50 for the evening program alone, it was not easy for Daniel Brunet, founder and curator of the festival, to select the pearls. The selection for the daytime program, coordinated by Monika Gossmann and Minna Partanen, was just as difficult.

A total of 10 workshops and 17 evening performances have been invited. There's a lot lined up: from improvisation or writing workshop, a capella music and live art to aerial acrobatics, contemporary dance and adaptations of Strindberg.

The entire lineup along with ticket prices can be soon be found here: <http://www.etberlin.de/expat-expo>

Each evening begins at 6pm and has a maximum of four performances, all ranging in length between 35 and 65 minutes. The daytime program will offer two selections per day, the first between 10am and 1pm, the second between 2pm and 5pm. Each workshop will last about 3 hours. The workshops are all led by international experts in their respective disciplines.

The EXPAT MARKET, a weekend-long marketplace cum performance installation, was a huge hit last year. It features the goods and services of international visual artists, artisans, business owners and performers. This year it will be held on Saturday, June 14 and Sunday, June 15 from 12pm to 6pm – this time in the theater's gorgeous courtyard as well!
